Scholarships, Grants, and More

Get Involved in Standards

www.astm.org/forstudents

Win awards and scholarships!

$10K Graduate Scholarships

Up to four master's/doctoral students per year

Demonstrate awareness/interest with ASTM International standards

Deadline: April 30

$500 Project Grants

Multiple awards for senior/graduate capstone design projects

Connection to ASTM International standards

Deadline: October 31

Washington Internships for Students of Engineering (WISE)

Student sponsored for prestigious Washington, D.C., program

10-week, paid internship focused on intersection of engineering/technology with pubic policy

Deadline: April 1

STUDENTS: Jumpstart your professional development! Join one of the world's top standards development organizations for FREE!

Industry-Specific Awards from Technical Committees

– Mather Scholarship
  Up to $7,500 for sophomore to graduate student interested in cement/concrete (C09) materials technology

– Mather Student Contribution Award
  $1K plus travel to meeting of concrete and concrete aggregates committee (C09) for student who has developed proposed standard or research paper

– Norton Memorial Scholarship Award for Women
  $1K for senior or first-year graduate student interested in physical metallurgy (committee E04) or materials science

– Fatigue/Fracture Student Paper Award
  Honor for high quality research papers in fracture, subcritical crack growth, presented at meeting of fatigue/fracture committee (E08)

Student Members Join FREE!

Learn current technical information, be informed about standards work, and attend events. Take a front-row seat to the process. Network with technical experts and business leaders from around the world. Enhance your knowledge about standards before you start using them in the workplace.

Also:

– Research and publication opportunities
– Quarterly student e-newsletter
– Free symposia registration

Professor of the Year Award

Cash awards to recognize educators who develop students' understanding of standards (award also given to their institution)

Deadline: August 31

For more information, contact Travis Murdock
tmurdock@astm.org | tel +1.610.832.9826